Subject: a short history of Peter Laurie

I greet all my high school classmates on the occasion of our fiftieth anniversary reunion and wish you well.

My years after high school took me to Brown, a university founded by my family in colonial times, though I went on scholarship. Thereafter, I married Johanna Muntz, older sister to Kindra, and took a long honeymoon in Italy, Greece and France that determined the course of the rest of my life. I would return to each of these countries more than once to live and teach. I would also reside in Turkey and Norway.

I have written much but published little, since much of what I write is regarded as out of sync with its time. Our times are widely regarded as disastrous, so none need be surprised. Those who want to read me will need a good library for obscure literary publications, reference to the Guide to Periodical Literature, much patience, but it can be done.

I have two grown children, Evan, 35, with four children, and Fiona, 28, with one.

I presently live in Keene, New Hampshire with my wife, my daughter and her two-year son Cameron. My son and his brood live nearby in rural Gilsum on a delightful homestead of forty acres he spent the summer renovating.

Best wishes to everyone. Have a great time.
